

Supply Chain Management Master's Credentials A Guide for SCALE Alumni

Alumni of the SCALE Network's master's programs are responsible for correctly listing/referring to their credentials on CVs, public profiles (LinkedIn, etc), and other materials.

As a matter of academic, professional, and personal integrity, alumni must accurately represent the details of their degree/diploma, as well as the name and origin of the SCALE certificate. Remember that:

- The SCALE Network does not award degrees or diplomas
- SCALE certificates are awarded by the SCALE Network (not by MIT)

The specific degrees awarded vary by Center; see your diploma, or the table below, for the correct degree details for your program.

The information in this document applies to alumni of the SCALE master's programs and master's program credentials. See important note below on the GCLOG credential

How to Represent Your SCALE Master's Program Credentials

Do:

- ✓ ... correctly identify the university or center that awarded your degree
- ✓ ... refer to the SCALE certificate correctly (alumni of the master's programs receive a Global Logistics and Supply Chain Management Certificate from the SCALE Network)
- ✓ ... add the SCALE Certificate to your LinkedIn profile under "Accomplishments"
- ✓ ... correctly identify the issuer of the SCALE Certificate as the MIT SCALE Network (or MIT SCALE Global Network)

- ✓  Malaysia Institute for Supply Chain Innovation (MISI)
Master of Science - MS, Supply Chain Management
2018 - 2019
- ✓

Do Not:

- ✗ ... state or imply that your master's degree is from MIT if you graduated from from ZLC, LCL, NISCI, or MISI
- ✗ ... try to list the SCALE Certificate under "Education" on your LinkedIn profile, or combine your degree + certificate as a single entry under Education. The Education options only include degrees
- ✗ ... call the SCALE certificate a "Graduate Certificate"
- ✗ ... state or imply that MIT issued the certificate

- ✗  Massachusetts Institute of Technology
Masters Graduate Certificate, Logistics and supply chain management
2021 - 2022
- ✗  Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Supply Chain Management Master's Credentials A Guide for SCALE Alumni

Note

You may see (legitimate) references on LinkedIn or elsewhere to a SCALE “Graduate Certificate” – here’s why:

In addition to its master’s programs, the SCALE Network offers the low-residency GCLOG program in partnership with the SCALE Center for Latin-American Logistics Innovation (CLI). Students who successfully complete this non-degree program are awarded a Graduate Certificate in Logistics and Supply Chain Management (GCLOG).

Note the slight but important differences in the names of these certificates, shown at right. Be sure to identify your certificate correctly.

See additional info on master’s degree credentials, as well as alumni benefits by center, on the SCALE website.
